MARCH 2026

Positive Life & Learning Solutions provides center-based Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA) services for children with autism and related developmental needs. Our team delivers individualized, evidence-based therapy focused on communication, social skills, independence, and positive behavior change. We use data-driven practices to monitor progress and adjust treatment to meet each child's unique needs. Throughout the month of March, we continue to work closely with families to support skill development across home, school, and community settings.

ABA FUN FACTS

The principle of reinforcement—one of the core concepts in Applied Behavior Analysis—was first systematically studied by B. F. Skinner, who demonstrated that behavior is more likely to occur again when it is followed by a meaningful reward.

FUN WITH YOUR KIDDO

Parents can engage their child in simple outdoor activities during March, such as nature walks or park visits, to encourage exploration and communication. Incorporating play-based learning through games, crafts, or sensory activities can help build social, motor, and language skills in a fun and supportive way. Additionally, maintaining consistent routines while introducing small changes can support flexibility and independence.
